

Hello,

I understand the NAB's reluctance to compete with satellite radio providers. They can't match the coverage and programming options. But, for them to scold XM radio for offeraing a service to it's listners is crazy. Sure, I can get music, sports, and talk radio on terrestrial stations. In fact, I often can recieve the exact same programming at the same time. I choose on quality. Competition is good for business and the consumers of the United States. The NAB members simply need to improve their product to compete. Don't regulate satellite radio. It;s not the answer.

Thank you,
Ron Kroetz
Mentone, CA